TIP FROM THE PROS

I have students consistently tell me they want to be more consistent and think there is a “magic bullet” that will fix their swing. The key to being more consistent is having a more fundamental set up and swing positions so they do not have to make compensations throughout the swing. It’s really pretty simple in paper, the less compensations you have to make—the more consistent you are. When players become more aware of what the set up needs to feel like and where the club needs to be throughout the swing, they become more consistent and have more fun playing the game. If you would like to learn how to become more fundamental and consistent, call us at 255.7706.

RULES WIZARD

In the spirit of the Ryder Cup and upcoming Maxwell Cup, we have a match play rules wizard for you this month.

Q: In match play, Player A is 135 yards away and should be first to play since Player B is 125 yards away from the hole. Player B assumes it is their turn to hit and plays the shot out of turn. What is the ruling?

A: Player A has the option of cancelling Player B's stroke and requiring them to replay the shot. If player A does not cancel the stroke, Player B must play their ball as it lies without penalty.
